

ABSTRACT

A method to obtain approval of an electronic message. In one embodiment, a message is received from a first user which is addressed to a second user in the network and includes a request for input from the second user. In another embodiment, the message is sent to the second user and, if no indication is received to indicate that the second user has read the message, then the message is sent to a target mobile device associated with the second user.